To The Millis High School Class of 1993:

Congratulations to each of you and to your Class upon successfully completing your Millis Public School education.

You are entering a world that will increasingly expect you to be an active lifelong learner. This means not only more formal schooling for some but also a lifetime of learning through emerging technology. You are entering the world of work which will require a constant updating of your skills. Not the least of these skills will be working with others.

Your experiences in this small school setting has provided many opportunities to learn, play and work in ways that are very consistent with the small groupings that you will meet in the years ahead.

Wherever you go, I hope you find the kind of caring and support that has been a key part of your Millis schooling. Maintain your values and your positive outlook. The world is fortunate to have you joining in an active role of contributing your strengths to the many challenges that we all will meet in the years ahead.

I am proud to say that I am part of the Millis Schools. I hope you will always be proud to say, "I'm from Millis".

Very Sincerely,

Daniel K. Kehoe
Superintendent of Schools

To The Class of 1993:

Each class develops its own collective personality comprising the many unique ones which make up that collective composition. The resultant chemistry is the effect one is left with when formulating impressions. Your class, as many others, has made a very indelible mark in the minds of those of us who have had the pleasure to work with you over the past four years.

Your contributions to the school have been varied and many. Academically, your success in furthering your education are among the highest statistically of all graduating classes, and in sports you rank among the most successful of student athletes and very instrumental in returning us back to a school that is no longer taken lightly. Personally and socially, you are considered among the nicest of classes to pass through this school.

My congratulations go to each and every one of you for having achieved this milestone in your lives. The efforts you have made toward this accomplishment should be reflected upon, for they will be the bench mark of your future successes. The better prepared you are, the more likely you are to be of consequence to yourselves as well as to others. May your lives be filled with learning and your happiness and ultimate feeling of worth be reflective of not only the things you accomplish, but also of the things you share.

Sincerely,

Paul A. Brunelle

The most memorable game of the season was played at home against Westwood. This win led us to reach our shared goal of making it to the State Tournament. It was the highlight of the season to be able to add "1992" to the Volleyball Banner. Players honored with awards included Casey C. for Most Improved, Kathleen M. for Unsung Hero, and Captain Lesli H. for MVP. The memories this year were made even more special knowing that we were the last team Coach Andy "Spanky" Marak would ever coach. This season was the best!

Russian Farewell Concert

At the conclusion of our visit from Moscow School #1411 students, teachers and sponsors, the Millis High School Music Department sponsored two concerts, one during the school day and another in the evening. Both concerts received rave reviews from students and towns people. Russian Dancers were: Lena Bugrova, Dima Belousov, Tatiana Govorova, Sasha Donin, Vika Surina and Vasya Timchenko. Playing guitar was Russian Dvysinnikov.

Once again both schools enjoyed a memorable visit, renewing friendships, learning different cultures, exchanging teaching ideas and most of all having a lot of fun.

We look forward to our continued connection with Moscow School #1141 and to a year long visit from Nadia Ustinova next school year.

Welcome Address: Kathleen

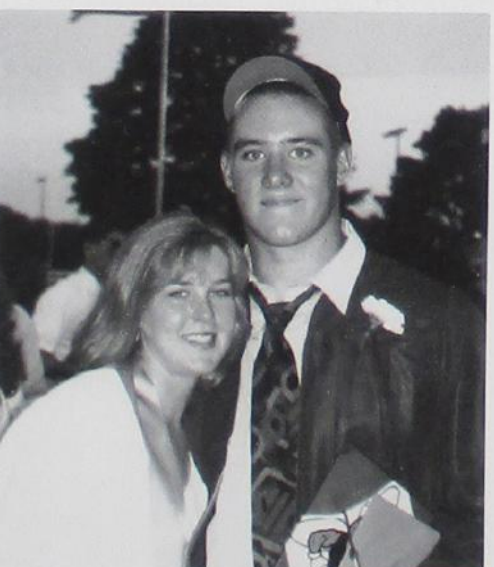

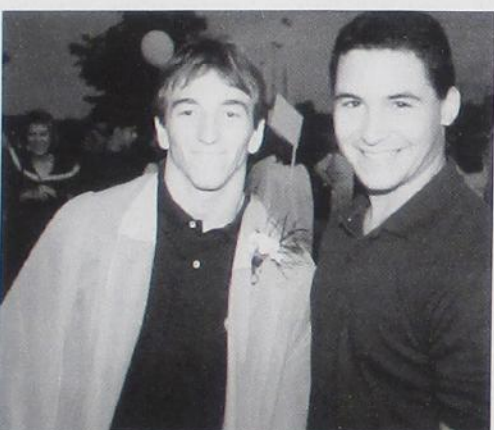

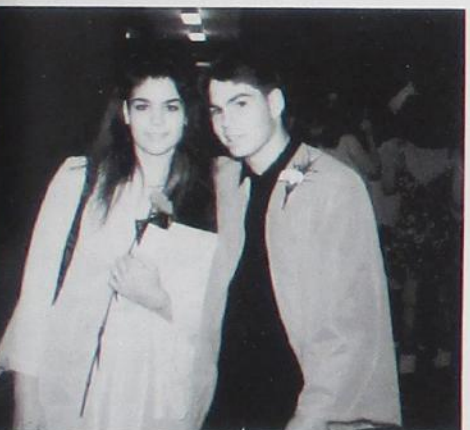

"The Star Spangled Banner" — Tara

Members of the School Committee, Mr. Kehoe, Mr. Brunelle, Faculty, family, and friends. On behalf of the Class of 1993, I would like to welcome you to this memorable occasion. It is my privilege to speak to you tonight, and to thank you for helping make our long awaited dream of graduation a reality.

As I sat down to write this speech, I was trying to think of a story I had read in the past that conveyed a message we could all learn from. Of all the stories that went through my mind, the one that kept coming back to me was one of my favorite children's classics written by Dr. Seuss called "Horton Hears a Who".

If you remember, Horton was an elephant whose ears were so keen that he could hear the cries of people in a community no larger than a speck of dust that existed on a small red clover. Horton, and only Horton, could hear their cries. Not the kangaroo, not the monkey, not the black-bottomed eagle, not the Wickersham brothers, nor the dozens of Wickersham uncles and Wickersham cousins. No one believed that these people existed except Horton who vowed to protect them. Through all his troubles, he kept saying "a person's a person no matter how small." And the community of people living on the clover kept yelling, "We are here. We are here. We are here. We are here."

Well, I say to you this evening, as a representative of the Millis High School Class of 1993, We, too, are here. And no matter how small our numbers, we also can make our voices heard. We live in a world that is crying out for help. The people in the former country of Yugoslavia are crying out and saying, "We are here", yet few seem to hear them. The homeless in our country are crying out, "We are here", yet again, society does not always seem to hear these cries. The children of our world are crying out for protection and safety in a society that has become increasingly full of danger and uncertainty. Horton never gave up believing in his small unseen friends or his quest to help and protect them. We also must listen to the cries heard throughout the world, and not give up trying to make it a better, safer place to live in.

Near the end of Horton's story, the survival of the very small community hinges on the voice of one very small citizen named Jo-Jo. When his voice is added to all the others in the community crying out, the message is finally heard by the kangaroo, the monkey, the black-bottomed eagle, the Wickersham brothers, the Wickersham uncles, and the Wickersham cousins. Jo-Jo's small voice made the difference. Each one of us has the opportunity to be that one person who can make a difference in the world and can make all of our voices be heard.

Let us go forth using the knowledge we have procured so that we may make wise decisions. As we enter a new phase in our lives, we will be presented with a multitude of opportunities. Some we will take advantage of, and others we will not. Let us recognize how fortunate we are to possess a future of unlimited possibilities.

Valedictory
Kerry Lyn Mroccka

We must come together to improve the world so that those who cry for help, including those whose quality of life is threatened by war, hunger, homelessness, and violence, will have the opportunities in the future that lie before us today.

We, the Class of 1993, leave here tonight heading off in different directions to pursue our own interests and dreams. As the newest members of the world's adult community, we will set new goals, think new thoughts, and dream new dreams. We must believe in what we set out to do no matter what obstacles we may encounter or who may question our decisions.

Let us end this chapter of our lives, not forgetting it, but taking with us the valuable lessons we have learned in childhood through parents, teachers, stories, and experiences. Despite our small numbers, we are here, and we will make a difference in the world. We now become the role models who will shape the world for the future generations. As we prepare for the future, let us not forget our pasts. Let us not forget our friends, families, and all the people who have made a difference in our lives. The people and experiences from our past will forever influence us in the future. However, we need to remember that our dreams are ours alone and that in order for them to come true, we must be true to ourselves first as Horton taught us. Let us follow the example set by Jo-Jo. Each and every one of our voices is important. Let them be heard now, tomorrow, and throughout the rest of our lives. I would like to leave you tonight with this message paraphrased from Dr. Seuss,

"We can prove we are persons no matter how small,

And our whole world can be saved by the smallest of all."

Welcome. I would like to begin by acknowledging some of the people who have influenced my life during the past four years. First, I would like to thank my friends and classmates, with whom I have shared many precious memories. I would like to thank my family, my sisters for being my role models, and my parents for their continuous love and support without which I could not be here today.

And finally, I would like to thank the true unsung heroes of this bittersweet occasion: The faculty of the Millis School System. Not only have they provided us with an excellent education, but they have also become our friends. We will never forget them.

Today, I would like to introduce you to a little girl. Her name is Vanessa and she is 7 years old. Vanessa came into my life and the life of my family by chance . . . but was someone to whom we gave our love willingly and unconditionally.

You see, Vanessa is involved in the Big Brother/Big Sister program and she was matched with my sister Tracy. Vanessa is the most 7 year old girl; she loves to ride her bike and play dolls and commands a lot of attention. But Vanessa is also something else. Vanessa is black. Now, I'm sure like me you're saying "so what?" Unfortunately, all too often, Vanessa and Tracy witness stares, whispers and curious looks because of their racial differences. Recently, Tracy and Vanessa were out shopping when a young child near them began staring and pointed them out to his mother. His mother looked up, grimaced and responded as she grabbed her child's hand and walked away, "She's just different". Vanessa, hand in hand with Tracy, asked why these people were staring and whispering about her. Tracy smiled and said simply, "It's because you're so beautiful." Unfortunately, Vanessa is no stranger to such narrow-minded comments. Growing up in a predominantly white neighborhood, she was verbally abused by her neighbors and classmates and, as a result, is today suspicious of anyone who offers her a second look.

Today, I'd like to re-introduce you all to a dream. A dream where people are not suppressed by the color of their skin, not ostracized for what they believe in, not taunted for their religious affiliation. A dream where a black child can walk hand in hand with a white adult and not be stared at . . . or even worse . . . rationalized.

Today I would like to introduce you to an idea; a call to action for the 1993 graduating class of Millis High School. Often times these speeches seem to have a wonderful way of stating the obvious; things that our parents, guardians, counselors and political leaders have told us for years; that is to move ahead in life, taking what we've learned and apply it to wherever our paths in life lead us. Today, I introduce us to a different challenge. Whether you are individuals, intend to better yourself by entering the work force, the military or by attending college, I urge you to educate yourselves in a subject that is offered on no text book, journal or cliff notes. That is the subject of prejudice. I ask that over the next year, wherever you go, you make a commitment, a commitment to educate yourself about someone who is quote, unquote, "different". Perhaps an individual who is physically challenged, an individual of a different race, perhaps of a different religion or someone who, for some crazy reason, just doesn't see eye to eye with you. Get to know this person better; where he comes from, what he's been through and where he intends to go. Introduce him to your dreams and your differences and learn to appreciate all the offerings that make this nation a wonderful melting pot.

Salutatory
Tara Beth Thistle

Incidents similar to the riots in Los Angeles last April, the racial melee and tensions in South Boston last month and the shooting sprees that plague our inner-city neighborhoods will no longer be just front page news if we neglect to recognize their force and disastrous ramifications. Rather, they will be our streets and our schools, our classmates and your children that harbor the hostility and ill-bred tension that is so prevalent in our world today; who are the assailants as well as the victims.

Websters Dictionary defines the word "peace" as, "freedom from war and civil disorder; harmony in human relations". Today, I challenge us, the Class of 1993, to serve as the poster children of peace. Let us concern and consume ourselves with matters of the heart, not of the hand. Let us appreciate each other, male and female, black and white, Asian and Hispanic, Jew and Gentile, for who we are and not prejudge one another for "what" we are. Let us work towards a day when there are no limitations or restrictions in life due to gender, race or sexual preference; a place where the majority does not necessarily rule. Where appreciation of individuality is the example and not the exception.

Without true understanding and appreciation for individual life we are no better off than we were 25 years ago and will continue to breed the hatred and ignorance that is tearing apart our world today.

So today, I leave you, having introduced you to a great challenge, a better place, but more importantly . . . to each other.

Amanda,
 Congratulations on all you've done.
 Best of luck in the future.

Do you not know? Have you not heard? The LORD is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth. He will not grow tired or weary, and his understanding no one can fathom. He gives strength to the weary and increases the power of the weak. Even youths grow tired and weary, and young men stumble and fall; but those who hope in the LORD will renew their strength. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint. -Isaiah 40:28-31
